A single inspired teacher in a classroom, a single picture worth a thousand words, the single step beginning the longest journey, a single sunny break in the clouds after a dark rainy night, one sincere warm smile on a day when many are cold and indifferent, the bright idea of one person in a world-changing innovation: we call this the "power of one."

For the past two and a half years of building a sophisticated organizational advocacy program, we have tried to reassure teachers that they are not alone in the fight to defend their programs. We have called on collective efforts, collective information, collective memory, and collective wisdom to avoid a reinvention of the wheel with every parent organization and school-board showdown. We have portrayed advocacy as a complex art, requiring us to use the strength we know exists in numbers, and cautioning us to avoid becoming a one-man band with a fast burn-out rate.

The number of useful databases linked from our national advocacy site, the number of state fact packs, advocacy coordinators and associates will do nothing by themselves to save a single French program. So very often a happy resolution to a challenge can be traced to a single timely gesture of one individual, even though that person may have had the backing of many.

So what can one person do? Of course the adage “A stitch in time saves nine” applies to appropriate and timely promotion of French among your students and out in your community. Doing this will make it less likely that you will have to be an advocate for your own program. You should also, however, be aware that certain promotional activities actually help build foundations for future advocacy. Let me give you some examples.

Does your town have some French historical influence (explorers, evolution from a French fur trading post, a group of French settlers, etc.)? If the tie is of some significance, contact your local historical society and library to see if you could partner in an essay or presentation contest. Invite an associated historian or librarian to your class to make a relevant presentation. Make sure the event gets coverage in the local newspaper or air time in radio public announcements. Make sure someone talks about it at a parent or school board meeting. You have just made some important potential allies, since the newspaper article and other announcements promoted the work of the historical society and the local public library. In addition, you have brought public attention to your program for its sensitivity to local cultural heritage.

Does your town, county, or region have a French- or Francophone-owned company? Or perhaps there is a company that is export-dependent on countries in the Frenchophone world. Invite an informed company representative to speak about this to your students. Partner with a chamber of commerce for an essay or presentation contest, and make sure the news finds media channels. Now count your allies. You have potential support from the chamber of commerce and from the company, both of whose names have been given a rare media halo. And of course, your program gets exposure for bringing highly practical real-world knowledge to students.

How good are your graduates? Do you have alumnae who have received some kind of recognition because of their knowledge of French? If you have outstanding alums, partner with your local guidance counselor to write an interest article for the newspaper, showing what one can do with French. Now you have guidance counselors, parents, and alumnae in your camp.

Do you have some really talented junior and senior students and a local elementary school which is looking for enrichment activities? Get together with the service learning people in your school district to provide appropriate activities. You might also think about the National Service Learning Clearinghouse [www.servicelearning.org].

Make sure there is media coverage. You now have allies among elementary-school students, teachers, administrators, and parents. You have given your students an opportunity for service-learning credit, and the media knows you can give them a newsworthy story.

What can one person do when a need for advocacy arises? Try to spot it before it becomes an emergency. Timing is everything.

Do you remember that great French program at Acmetown High School? It seemed like Mme Dufour’s students took all the prizes, had lots of guest speakers, and went on frequent field trips, even though there were so many students. She retired three years ago, and now you see a French position open at AHS. Unless that program has expanded by one position under new leadership, it may be in deep trouble. Better check it out, or contact someone who can. Your action might be what is needed to save French for the kids in Acmetown.

Did you read recently about Pauptertown, where they are having a huge budget shortfall? Isn’t that the place where they were boycotting French imports two years ago? You know they have a French program, but you don’t know the teacher’s name. Find out, and check on the French program? It likely has a reduced enrollment and is sure to be on the chopping block as they calculate the new budget. You might be in time to intervene.

Creating Solidarity through AATF Membership

Have you recently thought about the importance to you professionally and personally of belonging to an association of nearly 10,000 teachers of French? What kind of solidarity does the AATF offer you and colleagues who range from pre-service to continuing service? The AATF is working resolutely to meet the needs of teachers new to the profession, teachers who wish to renew their skills and build on their knowledge of pedagogy, the French language, and Francophone cultures, as well as teachers wishing to maintain and expand their French programs, and retired members. The Association offers something to fulfill all of these needs and also proposes ways that members can grow through their contributions to the profession and their sharing with other colleagues.

At a time when we often feel that policy decisions affecting the teaching of world languages are not supportive of our mission to create more French speakers, we need to focus on the strength that we have as members of the world’s largest association of French teachers. That influence comes from numbers, and our voice can be heard most convincingly when we speak in solidarity. This means that we as members of the AATF must be more visible, offer more support and services, and communicate more effectively with each other and with the public.

We estimate that there are about 20,000 teachers of French in the U.S. who are not yet part of the AATF. We each should lead by example and recruit more members to the AATF. We want to reach those in underrepresented communities who want to support and sustain. To meet these objectives we need to identify by name and contact information those who we have not yet reached, whether they are enrolled in higher education programs or are already in the classroom. Will you identify potential AATF members and contact them? Can you send the mailing and electronic addresses of these candidates to AATF national headquarters so that we may contact them?

The AATF Executive Council has set as a priority to increase membership and provide services to members. Vice-President Will Thompson as chair of the AATF Membership Task Force is asking that at every level of our association, national, regional, chapter, and individual, to accept a role in building professional strength. Recruitment materials have been and are continuing to be developed at the national level, but those best placed strategically to use these tools are at the chapter level and at the institutional or school level. There is nothing more powerful than one person inviting another to be part of our mission and to attend a meeting or an event organized by the local chapter. The benefits collectively and individually need to be communicated to others who have not yet decided to become an AATF member. Although recruitment is a yearlong activity, our membership efforts intensify in the fall, and we need each member to commit time and effort to this initiative. This is the time to take advantage of our 3-for-1 membership promotion: for every three members recruited, the recruiting member receives a complimentary membership. For more details on this incentive, visit the AATF Web site [www.frenchteachers.org]. To receive recruitment materials, please contact AATF Headquarters at [aatf@frenchteachers.org].

Telling “Our” Story to Potential Members

In recruiting new members, we all have a story to tell about why we are members and why we continue to maintain our membership. So that you can generate your own story in this recruitment effort, let me share my story. Why did I join the AATF more than 30 years ago has an easy response: noblesse oblige. If I wanted to be a teacher, I felt that I needed to act professionally and join the association that promoted and supported my chosen discipline, French. My mother was my prime role model for this decision, for she was a member and a leader in a number of organizations that reflected her commitment as a social science teacher. If that had not been enough, I would have joined because all the French teachers in my school district were AATF members and were good role models for a beginning teacher.

Why I have remained an AATF member has both a short and a longer answer. In a nutshell, a strong value placed on professionalism and a desire to continue learning have kept me renewing my membership year after year. The learning objective... has both a people element (colleagues and students) and a material component, relating to knowledge and resources. I enjoy the collegial relationships that I have formed over the years, and I feel rewarded by each discovery and acquaintance I make. This makes me want to share with other colleagues what I have found and learned. It also encourages me to validate the knowledge, skills, and information gained by incorporating them into my instruction and lessons. Not only am I energized by my new experiences, but by incorporating acquired knowledge and resources into my classes, I can make my classes more rewarding and satisfying for my students and myself. The opportunities for growth are inexhaustible, which is what keeps the fun and excitement in being a teacher of French.

For a longer answer, I have made a list of what I value in my AATF membership. The following categories are not ordered by importance but represent my total satisfaction with being part of an association that is composed of the largest group in the world of teachers of French. How many of these also reflect your own desire to stay connected to the AATF?

- Keeping abreast of emerging and current topics in the profession;
- Finding out about resources (people and materials), events, programs, and technology from which I can learn or which I can use;
- Expanding my collegial base to learn new ideas, approaches, and strategies;
- Taking advantage of publications, workshops, scholarships, and conferences to learn from and collaborate with experts in the field;
- Traveling to Francophone regions and countries, especially to attend AATF summer conventions;
- Improving my own skills and knowledge related to teaching French language and Francophone cultures;
- Learning about opportunities for students and finding ways to promote them to students;
- Energizing my French classes and my students' experiences by using what I discover or learn;
- Experiencing professional satisfaction by sharing with other colleagues informally or through sessions, workshops, and publications;
- Exercising leadership by contributing to or organizing projects that benefit colleagues and the profession.

Is there something with which every member can identify as a reason for maintaining AATF membership? May I encourage you to create your own list to use in adding new members to your chapter, for new members increase the talent base of the chapter and the solidarity of French teachers across the country? Once you have invited colleagues to be part of your chapter, do give them a role to play, for recruitment means more than paying one's dues. It means recruitment to make a contribution. An investment in time and effort is key to receiving the rewards of membership: a wider network of collegial resources, knowledge, and opportunities for ourselves and for our students.

Sharing What the AATF Can Do For French Teachers

To convince others to join the AATF, each recruiter needs to convey personal reasons for membership and be able to identify particular benefits that are tailored to the professional objectives of potential enrollees. Let me share some of the resources of the AATF, which can also help you shape your recruitment argument to future members.

Three of our recent initiatives include an advocacy program, a mentoring program, and a book club. Our advocacy initiative, launched by Robert "Tennessee Bob" Peckham, is now the Commission on Advocacy (see pages 1, 17), and 31 states and the District of Columbia now have advocacy liaisons and 15 Web sites devoted to advocacy for French. The AATF Tête-à-Tête Program (a project of the Articulation Commission, directed by Suzanne Hendrickson and supported by Jo Ellen Sandburg, see page 37), has brought together French teachers looking for assistance in building their French programs and for a chance to share with colleagues. Currently, one-third of AATF chapters have identified a liaison to the national initiative. The AATF Book Club, introduced by Myrna Delson-Karon (Québec literature), followed by Michèle Bissière (Francophone cinema), and now continued by Robert Lafayette (French in America, see page 9), provides interesting readings in French with study guides that can enhance reading experiences, individually or in group discussions.

The AATF commissions are moving ahead to provide more resources for members, and here are some examples. The Culture Commission (Marie-Christine Koop, Chair) has published two volumes, France at the Dawn of the Twenty-First Century: Trends and Transformations and Le Québec aujourd'hui: Identité, société et culture (see page 39) and is developing interactive classroom applications on CD-ROM to accompany the first volume. The FLES* Commission (Harriet Saxon, Chair, see page 35) is completing a new publication, New Trends in FLES*, which will focus on addressing the needs of the special learner. The Commission on French for Business and Economic Purposes (Eileen Angelini, Chair) has made available a CD-ROM project, created by Will Thompson, Teaching Business French: Textbooks, Reference Tools, and Pedagogical Aids (see page 21).

The Middle School Commission (Janel Lafond-Paquin, Chair) is completing units on topics, such as Martinique, Quebec Carnaval, Generics, Generic Grammar Activities, Cultural Participation and Research Project, Voyageons à Paris, Food and Fêtes, and Poetry, to be published in CD-ROM format. The Students Standards Commission (Nancy Gadbois and Bonnie Adair-Hauk, Co-Chairs) is working on a volume of exemplary standards-based units in French, with a working title of Making Global Connections Using French Language and Culture: Standards-Based Lessons K-16.

The Telematics and New Technologies Commission (Lara Lomicka Anderson, Chair, see page 13) has begun publishing materials on the AATF Web site, and these include teaching ideas and suggestions for interesting Web sites.

Additional resources, including sessions at national and regional conferences, are offered by all our commissions. For example, the Community College Commission (Denise McCracken, Chair) and the High School Commission (Brenda Benzin, Chair) are directing their efforts to identify outstanding French programs. Helping teachers work for National Board Certification is the continued focus of the Commission on Professional Teacher Standards (Susan Colville-Hall, Chair). The Commission on Colleges and Universities (Patricia Cummins, Chair) is exploring the professional masters' degree project and participation in the LinguaFolio national pilot. The Commission for the Promotion of French (Joyce Beckwith and Ann Sunderland, Co-Chairs) has been contributing articles to the National Bulletin and organizing swap shops.

Our executive director, Jayne Abrate, whose energy level seems indefatigable, has been responsible for new programs, e.g., Outstanding Senior in French Award (now expanded to higher education, see pages 19, 29), French Culture and Language Fellowships for Administrators, and AATF Administrator of the Year Award (with a prize for a student to attend Concordia Language Villages, see page 35). In addition to mounting memorable annual conventions in Atlanta, Quebec, and Milwaukee, she has developed publications for our Materials Center, e.g., Cuisiner et apprendre le français (see page 32). She has given the AATF a very visible presence by organizing exhibits, sessions, and workshops at regional and national conferences, as well as serving as president of JNCL-NCLIS, which advocates for foreign languages in Washington, DC.
For the past two years, the National French Contest team (Lisa Narug, Chair) has enrolled over 100,000 elementary and secondary students in this annual contest, making French the language contest with more participants than any other language contest in the country. One of two publications, the National Bulletin (Jane Black Goepper, Editor) provides announcements about opportunities, events, and materials. The French Review staff (Christopher Pinet, Editor), along with the National Bulletin, publishes articles that help teachers at all levels of teaching assignments and varied interests as they strive to remain current in the profession. In addition, members can enhance their own CVs and enrich their colleagues' experiences by making submissions to these publications. The Babillard team (Betty Clough, Editor) on the AATF Web site [www.frenchteachers.org] provides a venue for questions from members, postings of K-12 teaching positions, and announcements of events, resources, and programs for teachers and their students.

Is this an impressive list of resources? We haven't yet listed all the benefits, which don't stop with a plethora of materials for National French Week, Small Grants, and scholarships in France, Belgium, and Quebec. Moreover, the resources continue to expand. The AATF is a work in progress.

Thanks for the Memories

Everything has a time and a season, and the time to pass the gavel to the next AATF President, Marie-Christine Koop, will occur at the close of 2006. It has been a pleasure and distinct honor to serve you as president for the past three years. Not only have I learned more about our Association and our various partners in promoting and supporting French and foreign languages, but I have grown to appreciate even more the excellent work that the leaders and members of our 75 chapters are undertaking. At the same time, I have the greatest admiration for the projects that members of the AATF Executive Council and the 13 AATF Commissions have initiated and are continuing to develop.

All of our accomplishments of the past three years have been realized because of the solid foundation provided by past AATF presidents, executive directors, executive council members, commission chairs, chapter officers, and Association members. As we build on past achievements, we are also cognizant of the contributions that current leaders are making, which encourage a forward momentum. I wish to express my appreciation to those whose continued efforts will create a wonderful legacy for the future of our organization. Foremost among these, as we all recognize, is our Executive Director, Jayne Abrate, whose commitment to the AATF is an inspiration and a springboard for future undertakings. May our professional efforts always have as a focal point the individual French teacher connected to the chapter and national AATF, for we are as strong collectively as we are individually!

Bonne continuation!

MESSAGE DE LA SECRÉTAIRE GÉNÉRALE

Chers Collègues,

Je viens de rentrer d’une visite de trois semaines en France et en Belgique. Marie-Christine Koop et moi nous sommes rendues à Liège où nous avons visité les différentes installations hôtelières et le Palais des Congrès. Les responsables de la ville et de la région de Liège ont tous l’air ravis de notre venue, et nous sommes convaincues que l’accueil liégeois aura de quoi enthousiasmer les congressistes de l’AATF.

Nous entreprenons dans les semaines à venir une amélioration du site Web de l’AATF. Nous espérons pouvoir bientôt vous offrir la possibilité de paiements en ligne pour les cotisations aussi bien que pour la commande de documents pédagogiques et promotionnels. Notre objectif est de rendre le site encore plus performant.

Amateur Levitte and Executive Director Abrate

Prix et programmes

Pour la deuxième fois, nous accorderons le Outstanding Administrator Award. Si vous connaissez un administrateur qui soutient les programmes de langues étrangères et surtout le français, pensez à le nommer pour ce prix. L’administrateur est reconnu, bien sûr, mais encore mieux, nous lui accorderons une bourse pour qu’un élève passe un séjour aux Concordia Language Villages. Nous organisons ce prix en collaboration avec Concordia et l’Ambassade de France (voir page 35).

Pendant l’hiver vous pourrez profiter des nombreuses possibilités de formation professionnelle organisées par les chapitres. En plus, nous travaillons avec divers partenaires afin d’offrir des bourses pour des stages en Belgique, en France et au Québec. Nous n’avons pas encore pu confirmer toutes les bourses (voir page 19), mais les détails seront affichés sur le site Web dès confirmation. Si vous connaissez un étudiant qui poursuit un diplôme universitaire pour devenir futur professeur de français et qui envisage de passer un semestre ou une année d’études dans un pays francophone, posez sa candidature pour la bourse Walter Jensen (voir page 18).

Pour la troisième année consécutive, Intercultural Student Experiences offre à un membre de l’AATF le Language Matters Award. Nous cherchons des candidats qui mettent en valeur l’international dans leurs classes (par des correspondances, par des échanges) ainsi que la communication orale (page 31).

Vous trouverez à la page 8 le message du Président Bush pour la Semaine du Français 2006. Malheureusement, la lettre est arrivée trop tard pour que nous la distribuions aussi largement que nous aurions voulu le faire, mais nous le reproduisons dans ce numéro afin que vous puissiez vous en servir localement dans vos actions pour la défense du français.

Si mes commentaires dans ce message paraissent un peu disparates, ils ont tous pour objectif de démontrer que l’AATF est une association dynamique, qui cherche toujours à offrir des possibilités de formation professionnelle, de soutien matériel et moral, de bons conseils pour la promotion et la défense du français, d’échange entre collègues et de collaboration à tous les niveaux d’enseignement. Si vous trouvez dans ces pages, dans les pages de la French Review, dans nos congrès, dans les activités des chapitres de quoi nourrir votre curiosité professionnelle, si ce que vous y trouvez est aussi utile qu’agréable, parlez-en à vos collègues qui ne sont pas ou plus membres de l’AATF.

Nous cherchons à renforcer toutes nos actions pour le français en représentant le plus grand nombre de professeurs possibles. Personne ne peut plus rester en coulisses. Faites la campagne pour l’AATF en convaincant vos collègues à y adhérer.

Pour conclure, j’ai été fière au mois de septembre de pouvoir remettre à Son Excellence Jean-David Levitte, Ambassadeur de France, une plaque commémorant sa nomination au statut de Membre honoraire de l’AATF. L’Ambassadeur de France bénéficie toujours du statut de Membre honoraire grâce à ses fonctions, mais le Conseil d’administration a voulu reconnaître le travail exceptionnel de M. Levitte et son soutien des professeurs de français en lui conférer ce statut à titre individuel. Je l’ai remercié au nom de tous les membres de l’AATF.

REGION III: NEW YORK STATE

The Grand Concours and National French Week are by far our most successful activities. The chapters which are the strongest are those where secondary schools, colleges, and universities collaborate. Our greatest challenge is developing advocacy and mentoring programs in order to maintain our French programs. We are working diligently to increase promotional activities which give our chapters visibility. We are indeed fortunate in this region to have a local French heritage that can lead to collaboration on genealogy and local history projects such as the 400th anniversary of the arrival and the explorations of Samuel de Champlain in 1608-1609.

REGION IV: MID-ATLANTIC

Region IV is experiencing the same challenges as all teachers of French across the country. Some report program closings while others decry the lack of interest among their colleagues in participating in local activities designed to promote French. On the other hand, most report with great enthusiasm overwhelming successes and share innovative and creative activities. They attest to the boundless energy and positive attitude that characterize teachers of French. Indeed, Region IV is alive and thriving!

If the Grand Concours is the barometer for measuring our state of health, we are indeed in great shape. The huge participation in this activity is a testimony to the hard work of students, teachers, and especially National French Contest Administrators. Out of more than 100,000 participants on the national level, Region IV accounts for 19,287 with an overall increase of 795. This makes Region IV number 1 for the second consecutive year! Our deepest thanks go to the Chapter Contest Administrators: Susan Laws, Lorna Wingate, Connie Mears, Sister Mary Helen Kashuba, Bonnie Youngs, Virginie Gourmet, Debbie Batle, Tammy Wübben-horst, Margaret Corgan, and Laura Walker. In most cases, the Contest Administrators were also responsible for organizing the award ceremonies. This event has proven over and over again to be a morale booster for teachers and students and a great opportunity for publicizing success and thus promoting French. At their award ceremony, the New Jersey Chapter showered both students and teachers with congratulatory messages and with gifts purchased with funds donated by local businesses. Seeking support from the public at large served to spread the good word even to a larger public. Kudos to the New Jersey Chapter for this successful grassroots effort!

Other teachers in the Region chose to spend time this summer furthering their knowledge and skills by taking advantage of grants to various Francophone countries. The following received summer study scholarships: Frank La Ronca from Ridgewood, NJ to the Université de Montréal. Lois Foliard also from Ridgewood, NJ, received a grant to study in France. Nancy Cooper from Wilmington, DE went to the Université du Québec à Chicoutimi and Rita Nutter of Lancaster, PA and Manda Clancy of Lansdale, PA both head to France. Three other members received small AATF grants. Stephanie Schechner of the Philadelphia Chapter received $500 for the Francophone Day the Chapter is planning. Andea LaCombe of the Delaware Chapter was awarded $500 for La Semaine du Français activities, while Janet Gonter of the Pittsburgh Chapter received an AATF grant in the amount of $150 and a matching grant from her chapter for a Mobile Teaching Unit, and Laura Walker of the Northern Virginia Chapter was selected the National French Contest Administrator of the Year (large chapter). Also recognized for her efforts as a Contest Administrator was Lorna Wingate of the Maryland Chapter for having the largest FLES enrollment in the Grand Concours. Other honorees include Andea LaCombe of the Delaware Chapter who was named French Advocate of the Year and Muriel Dominguez, outgoing president of the Northern Virginia Chapter was named Chevalier dans l’Ordre des Palmes Académiques.

Education is the future of our country and the cornerstone of a hopeful tomorrow. Since 1927, the American Association of Teachers of French has encouraged the study of the French language and provided teachers with important educational resources. By organizing National French Week each year, the AATF encourages learning, promotes cultural awareness, and provides an opportunity to showcase the academic abilities of students across America.

I appreciate AATF teachers for building the minds and character of our Nation's youth and helping them gain important knowledge about languages and cultures from around the world. Your efforts make a positive difference in our communities and reflect our country's commitment to academic excellence.

Laura and I send our best wishes.

AATF SUMMER SCHOLARSHIPS PRELIMINARY ANNOUNCEMENT

Each year, thanks to the generosity of our numerous partners, the AATF is able to offer opportunities for summer study abroad to its members. The details of the 2007 scholarships have not yet been confirmed, but we hope to have final information by the end of November. Details will be posted on the AATF Web site [www.frenchteachers.org] as soon as they become available. In the meantime, we are outlining the application process here so that interested teachers can get started.

AATF French Government Scholarships

The French Cultural Service is offering AATF members a number of scholarships for study in France during the summer 2007. More information will be posted as it becomes available.

AATF Scholarships to Belgium

The Belgian government is again offering two summer scholarships. Details will be forthcoming shortly.

Quebec

In 2006, 11 AATF members were able to participate in summer programs in Quebec at the Université du Québec à Chicoutimi, the Université Laval, the Université de Montréal, and other institutions. We hope to confirm details for 2007 scholarships shortly.

Applicants for all of the scholarships must be American citizens or permanent residents whose first language is not French. The recipients must hold a teaching position in French during 2006-2007. Preference will be given to AATF members who have been in good standing since January 1, 2004. Current AATF chapter presidents and members of the AATF Executive Council are not eligible. Members who have received an AATF scholarship during the past five years (2002-2006) are also not eligible.

Recipients are expected to (1) prepare a cultural unit to be disseminated through the AATF Lending Library and (2) present a session around the same topic at the 2008 AATF conference.

The scholarships will be awarded by national competition to members who indicate a plan to use the scholarship to benefit themselves professionally and to enhance the curriculum for the students. Decision will be announced in early April 2007. A number of factors will be weighed:

• clarity and specificity of the candidate’s statement;
• reasons for applying and level of French (candidates are expected to have a level of proficiency which will allow them to follow university-level coursework in French);
• teaching assignment;
• evidence of professional commitment;
• future career plans in education;
• need for an immersion experience in a Francophone country;
• two letters of recommendation.

Application forms are available from your local Chapter President, on the AATF Web site [www.frenchteachers.org], or can be requested from National Headquarters. Forms can be duplicated.

Send the application to AATF Summer Scholarships, Mailcode 4510, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, IL 62901.

The application must be postmarked by March 1, 2007, to be considered for the scholarship. Incomplete applications will not be considered.

The Web site will have regular updates on AATF activities including Scholarships, National French Week, Awards [www.frenchteachers.org].
What is a wiki?

Wikipedia, one of the most well known wikis, defines a wiki as "a type of Web site that allows users to easily add, remove, or otherwise edit and change some available content." [To read more on wikipedia, please refer to LeLoup & Ponterio, 2006]. The origin of the word "wiki" comes from "Wiki" which means "quick" or "hurry" in Hawaiian; the first wiki (WikiWikiWeb) was named after a line of Hawaiian buses. Ward Cunningham coined the concept of a wiki, which is a type of social software.

A wiki can be described as a combination of a Web site and a word processing document. The content of a wiki is accessible from the Web, while at the same time it can be edited and updated similar to a word processing document. A wiki’s collaborative nature can be characterized by the fact that it can be updated by any number of users, and the community organizes and supplies the content.

Characteristics of Wikis

To begin, one of the more interesting features of a wiki is its collaborative nature. Users of a particular wiki can add, modify, and delete content. The history of the document is stored and can be accessed to see any changes that are made. Unless users are logged in, it may be difficult to actually determine who did what. Most wiki hosting sites offer the possibility of creating individual user accounts so that changes can be tracked. Lamb (2004, p. 38) summarizes some of the main features of wikis as follows:

1. Anyone can change anything;
2. Wikis use simplified hypertext markup;
3. Wikipage titles are mashed together;
4. Content is ego-less, timeless and never finished.

A wiki serves as a way for users to easily and quickly create a Web site. Due to the simplicity of wiki syntax, more time can be spent adding content than working on Web design. Titles often appear "mashed" due to the fact that the wiki attempts to provide quick page creation and simplicity in format. Additionally, wikis are organized by content rather than chronologically, like blogs (Godwin-Jones, 2003). Wikis offer the possibility of continuous collaboration so that information remains up-to-date.

Project Ideas

Building on the collaborative nature of the wiki, the uses of these tools in an educational setting are varied. Here are some of the projects that have been developed using wikis in the classroom:

1. Plan a trip: students can collaborate to plan a trip abroad [http://careo.elearning.ubc.ca/wiki?galiano];
2. Put together a reading list for a book club: students at Drew University are creating a book club for reading and discussion [http://drewbookclub.pbwiki.com/FrontPage];
3. Organize a conference: educators can use the wiki as a planning tool and then decide to host a conference or event [http://careo.elearning.ubc.ca/wiki?Technoculture];
4. Take collaborative notes: notes can be posted by students, verified by teachers; students can share the load in note taking; they are created collaboratively as a study resource [http://careo.elearning.ubc.ca/wiki?CS430];
5. Share and edit lesson plans: [www.wikiweb.org/index.php/Main_Page];
6. Create a resource page: students can post what they have learned related to grammar, culture or other resource. The following page [http://fteaching.wikispaces.com] is home to a foreign language teaching wiki resource page created by graduate students in foreign language methods classes;
7. Post book notes, reviews, or commentaries: students can comment on literature assignments and identify main characters, plots, subplots, objects, settings, and details of stories. This collaboration can serve both as a review and study aid [www.theplenty.net/wiki/index.php/Main_Page];
8. Engage in collaborative storytelling: wikis are used in some primary schools in Canada to teach collaborative storytelling to children [http://lizzy.lit.nrc.ca/LizzyHelpNew/public/wiki.cgi?Lizzy_in_primary_schools];
9. Collaborate for group writing projects: at Penn State, rhetoric students are using a wiki to develop ideas for writing projects [http://epochewiki.pbwiki.com/];
10. Develop an encyclopedia for a school and its surroundings: Case Western Reserve University uses a wiki to feature information about the school, social outings, biographical information, student group information and much more [http://wiki.case.edu/CaseWiki:Usage].

Using a wiki in a French literature and culture course

In addition to the projects mentioned above, I wanted to highlight a wiki project that recently took place in a French class. Cindy Evans reports on a project at Skidmore College where students created a wiki featuring aspects of Québécois culture [wiki: http://www.skidmore.edu/cgi-bin/wiki/FF209_001_f04.cgi/HomePage]. Students chose topics such as dance, music, cuisine, geography, and education and then researched their topics and provided content to a particular wiki page. In addition to content, students provided links to external sources as well as internal links to their peers’ sites, and integrated literary and historical class material. Professor Evans’ students used process oriented learning as they revised their work and peer edited activities so that they could participate actively in the project. Evans’ article on this project is available at [www.oberlin.edu/licit/pubs/wikiproject.doc].

Creating a Wiki

Creating a wiki involves a few simple steps. I have included a few wiki hosting sites below. These sites generally offer basic wiki services free of charge; in other words, free wikis are often limited to a certain amount of space, offer limited templates, and may require ads to appear on your wiki Web site.

- www.wikispaces.com/
- www.wikidot.com/
- http://pbwiki.com/
- www.oddmuse.org/
- www.cafewiki.org/ [a wiki hosting site in French]

Some of these wiki host sites offer video tutorials to show you how to get started and to familiarize you with a wiki. No matter which wiki you choose, set up takes only a few minutes and a series of two or three easy steps. Happy wiki-ing!

THE AFTERMATH OF 9/11 AND YEAR OF LANGUAGES: FROM SPUTNIK MOMENT TO REAL MOMENTUM IN LANGUAGE POLICY

Among the many effects of 9/11 on this country are a renewed sense of community in our willingness to help each other and our determination to disable those who would destroy us. Americans recognized that we were dangerously hampered by our inability to understand and communicate with the rest of the world. Fortunately for us the Joint National Committee for Languages and the National Council for Languages and International Studies (JNCL-NCLIS) [www.languagepolicy.org] has been constantly at work in the halls of Congress, supporting progressive moves in national policy. On a national level, our adaptive energy and in reaction to a pronounced lack of linguistic and cultural skills has resulted in support for the Foreign Language Assistance Act, the Lincoln Study Abroad Act, the new Department of Defense roadmap and increases in foreign language pay for the military, along with the National Security Language Initiative, a Teachers of Critical Languages Program, and many more. The Year of Languages in 2005, effectively promoted by the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages, brought our national shortcomings and the general virtues of foreign language instruction to the attention of a wider public, though television ads, tee-shirts, language ambushes, and government proclamations.

While these are impressive signs, it would be wrong to assume a direct and speedy transfer of national concerns into local and state venues, because of the relative autonomy of both school districts and the states which set policy for them. These are moved by community, state, and regional economic, cultural, and political forces. As for students, a recent study by Joseph Price and Carolyn Gascoigne found that national security needs played practically no role at all in their attitudes about language requirements.1 It is then important to assess what is happening at the state level. I have been able to do this with information drawn largely from the following Web sites:

National Council of State Supervisors of Foreign Languages [www.ncssfl.org]
State Scholars Initiative [www.wiche.edu/statescholars]
Education Commission of the States (report 745) [http://mb2.ecs.org]

Movement toward more specific high school expectations for the study of languages other than English is evident in Indiana’s “Core 40 Diploma Requirements,” still more in the support of Secretary of Education, Virginia Fox and of Governor Ernie Fletcher for all Kentucky students to study a foreign language.

In Delaware, on August 17, 2006, the State School Board unanimously approved the new high school graduation requirements proposed by its curriculum reform task force. The changes make Delaware’s standards among the most rigorous in the country, raising the required credits from 22 to 24 and requiring students graduating in 2013 to take two years of a foreign language.

A recent 18-hour option for high school graduation which the Florida Legislature passed in 2002 requires the completion of two credits in the same language or documentation of proficiency at a level equivalent to two years of instruction. All school districts submitted a K-12 Foreign Language Plan to the Florida Department of Education by June 30, 2004.

In Hawaii, starting in 2006-2007, students will have to choose World Languages, Fine Arts, or Career and Life skills to meet requirements for a regular diploma. Although the state’s elementary schools are not “required” to offer foreign language at this time, World Languages is presently listed as one of the subjects on the report card and is included in the nine Content and Performance Standards for all students.

One year of foreign language study fulfills Idaho’s requirement of two credits in Humanities for graduation from high school.

Beginning 2011-2012, Maine’s “Learning Results Endorsement” will guarantee that a high percentage of the state’s students graduate with study in a foreign language assessed according to the Maine’s standards in modern and classical languages.

In Michigan, a new core curriculum, with high standards for high school graduation, including two credits in Languages other than English, was approved in HB 5606 by both Michigan House of Representatives and Senate and then signed by the Governor. The languages component will be in effect in 2016.

New Jersey extended its expectations through requirements stated as options: (1) students complete an additional year of language study at the high school level or (2) they successfully complete a competency-based exit test.

In Oklahoma, beginning in the 2006-2007 school year, the “Achieving Classroom Excellence Act” will require that all students not signed out by their parents complete the following college preparatory curricular requirements relating to foreign languages:

two units of the same foreign or non-English language or two units of computer technology approved for college admission requirements. However, foreign language instruction is required for all students in grades K-8. This program will soon effect high school requirements.

In Texas, beginning with the freshmen of 2004-2005, all students have been required to graduate with what was the recommended plan, requiring two years of a foreign language.

In West Virginia beginning the fall of 2008, Foreign Language Level IA will be the state sequence for 7th graders and Foreign Language Level IB will be the sequence for 8th graders. High school students in the Professional Pathway must earn two credits of the same foreign language to graduate.

In Wyoming high schools, for the 2006 graduating class, any student wishing to earn an advanced or a regular diploma must demonstrate proficiency in a foreign language. Districts may define “proficiency,” although there is a state-provided language experience that may be used by districts to offer special language exploration courses leading to a relatively low level of proficiency. Students who do not demonstrate language proficiency will receive the lowest diploma.

There is also momentum evident in the increased accessibility of foreign language study. A proposal under discussion in Indiana would change in the “Middle School Curriculum Rule” to include a provision that the World Language curriculum be accessible to all middle school students. In Iowa, every high school has to offer four years of one foreign language. In New Hampshire all high schools, regardless of size, must offer three years of each of two languages. American Sign Language is included among the possibilities. In Ohio, high schools are required to offer three years of one foreign language or two years of two foreign languages so that students can earn an honors diploma. Nearly one half of school districts offer foreign language courses before high school. In Pennsylvania, public high schools are required to offer four consecutive years of a modern language and two consecutive years of another language (Latin, Greek, less commonly taught, or American Sign Language). Of 501 public school districts, Pennsylvania has about 130 K-12 foreign language programs all of which are very different models. In Texas, many districts are offering the middle school language program to afford students the opportunity to complete some of the high school graduation requirements in middle school. In Virginia, schools must offer a foreign language from 8th grade through 12th grade. Progress in FLES opportunities is outlined in “State Requirements for Foreign/World Languages in Elementary Schools” (June 2004) at [www.ncssfl.org/reports/index.php?state_reqs].

Still on the secondary level and operating in twenty states is a national program, “The Scholars Initiative,” involving an alliance between business community and educational leaders. The result is a rigorous state high school diploma, not aimed primarily at college-bound students, a state scholarships diploma. Among the requirements are two years of foreign language study. In most of the twenty participating states, the diploma is in early growing stages, not available in every district. These states are Arizona, Arkansas, Connecticut, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Utah, Virginia, Washington, and West Virginia. Colorado and North Carolina have been chosen to join, but are not yet participating members.

Finally, on the college level, we might well expect that the top ten colleges and universities named in US News & World Report special issues of recent years have admissions practices and policies highly favoring candidates with extensive foreign language study and shutting out those with none. Since many of us are discovering the enormous value of an education at a good state public college, it should be of considerable interest that the following states have decided freshman candidates must have foreign language learning experience for regular admission to all of their four-year colleges and universities: Arizona, California, Colorado (for 2010), Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, North Carolina, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Washington, West Virginia (for 2008). These states represent 53% of the nation’s current population. In Wisconsin, Delaware, Missouri, Nebraska, Alabama, Georgia, Illinois, Ohio, Connecticut, New Mexico and a number of other states, the flagship public institutions all require foreign language study as an undergraduate admission criteria. So the old question of whether you need a foreign language to get into college should be answered “only if you are interested in choice, quality and value.”

The progress made in foreign language requirements reflects indirectly the character of Americans. We help our neighbors, and are willing to own a responsibility toward the needs of the nation. For the most part, however, we are interested in what goes on in our own states, and what will affect regional and local fulfillment of the American dream. In general, just about all of the states need residents with foreign-language and culture skills, but many of them have no way to see the overall impact of the various international knowledge needs. In Tennessee, part of the TFLTA Web site is a hypertext essay called “Why Study a Foreign Language in Tennessee?” [www.utm.edu/departments/french/why.html].

It is a place where Tennesseans have gone over 31,000 times to discover how this knowledge works to their advantage economically and culturally. I suggest that this practice be extended nationally.

Advocates for all foreign languages should understand that the progress we see in increased requirements will translate into the spread and longevity of the language teacher shortage we are now experiencing in certain parts of the country. Advocates for French need to remember that what is happening with language requirements may produce sudden staffing needs with expected program results. Fortunately, French is a level-one commonly taught language, and there are more and more Americans attaining proficiency in the Intermediate-High to Advanced-High range through college programs enhanced by study abroad and home stays. It is also easy to demonstrate the importance of French, along with that of other commonly taught languages, in the national origins of a large proportion of export and foreign-direct investment dollars. Opportunities are lost if there is not a group of French teachers alert to all calls for assistance. This is why all chapters of the AATF must have advocacy coordinators and all states must have state-specific Web sites. Tune in to our advocacy web site to find out where your state stands: “Ideas for French Language & Culture Advocacy in the U.S.” [www.utm.edu/staff/globeg/advofr.shtml].

WALTER JENSEN SCHOLARSHIP FOR STUDY ABROAD

Thanks to the generosity of the late Walter Jensen, the AATF is able to offer a scholarship for study abroad to a future teacher of French. Income from gifts of stock given by Mr. Jensen will fund one $1500 scholarship per year to help a student pay for a semester or year’s study abroad. This award is intended to allow a deserving student to participate in a long-term study abroad experience he or she might not otherwise be able to afford. This award will be made for the academic year 2007-2008.
AATF SMALL GRANTS

At the Milwaukee Convention, the Executive Council again renewed the AATF Small Grants program for 2007 to support local projects by Chapter members who need an extra infusion of cash in order to get their project off the ground or to bring their project to completion. The total amount of funds available is $5000, with the maximum award being $500. Matching funds from the chapter to which the applicant belongs or from another source must be committed. In this way, it is hoped that the applicant can attract sufficient overall funding.

Application procedures and requirements remain the same as in previous years. A letter specifying the following should be sent to the Executive Director, Mailcode 4510, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, IL 62901 postmarked by March 1, 2007: (1) name of applicant and Chapter to which he/she belongs; (2) a brief summary of the project, including purpose, individuals involved, inclusive dates; (3) total anticipated budget; (4) funds requested; (5) other sources of funds being sought; INCLUDING AMOUNT TO BE MATCHED FROM CHAPTER TREASURY (This must be attested to by the Chapter Secretary-Treasurer). PLEASE NOTE: Every year some interesting requests remain unfunded because of lack of financial support at the Chapter level; it is important to begin the application process AS SOON AS YOU READ THIS by alerting your Chapter officers to your upcoming request.

Applicants should remember that the basic purpose of this modest program is to aid those members who need supplementary funds to carry out a worthy project that would otherwise be unfunded or underfunded. Projects must bear a relationship to the purposes of the Association, namely furthering the study of French in the U.S., and be of potential benefit to other AATF members or to his/her students. Under no circumstances will awards be made to carry out strictly personal research or to travel abroad for the sake of general enlightenment. Members at all levels of instruction may apply.

A committee will evaluate the applications and determine the recipients. Preference will be given to new projects having a wide impact. Projects for National French Week 2007 are encouraged.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

The AATF is launching a three-year membership campaign! See the announcement on page 21 for information concerning the 3-for-1 offer for a year’s free membership.

AATF OUTSTANDING SENIOR IN FRENCH AWARD EXTENDED TO THE COLLEGE LEVEL

Beginning in 2003, the AATF established an Outstanding High School Senior in French Award. In 2005, the Executive Council voted to extend this award to the college/university level. Any public or private secondary school or college/university student with at least one French teacher who is an AATF member may participate. Only one name per school per year will be accepted. In the event that there are multiple French teachers or professors in a given school or department, they must decide among themselves who the nominee will be and submit only one name to the AATF. In the event of multiple submissions, only the first name received will be considered for the award, based on postmark. The nomination must be made by a current AATF member.

To qualify for the award, a student must: have maintained an “A” average in French; have maintained a “B” average overall; be in his or her senior year at a public or private secondary school or at a public or private college or university; have demonstrated exceptional commitment to the study of French by participating in extracurricular activities related to French which may include but are not limited to the Grand Concours, study abroad, National French Week activities, or French Club, Pi Delta Phi, tutoring; at the time of graduation, have completed at least three years of formal French study; be a non-native speaker of French; be nominated by an AATF member. Only one student per school per year will be accepted.

Students will receive a certificate acknowledging their award and a press release to distribute to local media; a congratulatory letter will be sent to the principal or dean, and the student’s name will be placed on the AATF Outstanding Senior Honor Roll on the AATF Web site. The registration fee for the award is $25. For an additional $10 fee, students can also receive an Outstanding Senior in French medal.

There is no deadline for this award. The nomination form is posted on the AATF Web site and can be found on page 29.

The special offer for AATF members to subscribe to Le Français dans le monde has been continued. The review is now the official publication of the Fédération internationale des professeurs de français (FIPF) and is published by CLE International. The AATF has negotiated a special subscription rate for AATF members. Each year more than 500 AATF members have taken advantage of this special offer.

Members have two subscription options. For a yearly subscription payment of $53, you can receive six issues of Le Français dans le monde plus two accompanying CDs as well as two special issues of Francophonie (a savings of $76 over regular subscription rates). For a yearly subscription payment of $63, you can again receive six issues of Le Français dans le monde with two accompanying CDs, two special issues of Francophonie, and, in addition, two issues of the more research oriented Didactique “Recherches et Applications” (a savings of $79 over regular subscription rates).

To facilitate the process, AATF members may pay the AATF at the same time they make their annual dues payment, and we will handle the transfer to CLE International. Subscriptions may be obtained by filling out the appropriate space on your 2007 dues renewal invoice which was mailed to all AATF members in early October. Those who subscribed for 2006 may renew their subscription in the same way. It can take several weeks to process these subscriptions. Therefore, it is important to send your renewals as early as possible.

Consult the Web site at [www.fdlm.org] for more information. We hope that many AATF members will take advantage of this opportunity to receive Le Français dans le monde at a 40% savings. Please note that subscriptions will not be accepted after May 31 for any given calendar year.

To communicate address changes, contact [fdlm@fdlm.org].

REMINDER TO FDLM SUBSCRIBERS

If you move, you need to inform Le Français dans le monde directly. The AATF cannot keep track of and communicate these changes. Send an e-mail to [address@frenchteachers.org], AND send any address changes for Le Français dans le monde to [fdlm@fdlm.org].
The AATF invites nominations for four annual awards for outstanding teachers, one at each level: elementary school, middle school or junior high school, high school, and higher education (university, college, or community college). The purpose of the award is to recognize teachers who have demonstrated excellence and commitment in the teaching of the French language and French and Francophone cultures and literatures.

Each award winner will receive a framed certificate from the AATF recognizing his or her outstanding contribution to the teaching of French and a one-year complimentary membership in the AATF for 2008, a cash award, and a one-year subscription to Le Français dans le monde. An official presentation will be made at the AATF Awards Banquet in Baton Rouge in July 2007.

Nominations may be made by any AATF member in good standing or by an AATF Chapter. The nominee must be an active member of the AATF. All documents must be submitted by February 1, 2007.

The selection committee will consist of two members of the AATF Executive Council and one member at large. Any nomination that does not conform to the guidelines below in length or content will not be considered. A teacher may receive the award only one time at a given level. If there is no suitable candidate at a given level, the AATF reserves the right not to make an award.

The AATF will acknowledge the recipients of the awards by sending a letter to their principal and/or supervisor and will issue a press release, if requested. The National Bulletin will include a feature article on the recipients.

AATF MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

The AATF is again sponsoring a membership recruitment campaign. Membership in your professional association is the business of each member. Just as we seek to promote the study of French among our students and administrators, we must also promote membership in the AATF to all our colleagues, in particular our younger colleagues. We ask you to reinforce the benefits of belonging to a professional association to your colleagues.

How It Works

We are offering a special three-for-one incentive to current members to recruit new members. If the current member can get three new members to join, 2007 membership will be free. The requirements are:

♦ the three new members’ forms with payment must be mailed together to National Headquarters with the sponsoring AATF member’s name prominently indicated;
♦ the current member’s preprinted renewal invoice should, if possible, accompany the three new forms;
♦ if the current member has already paid dues for 2007, the free membership will be applied to the next calendar year; no refunds will be made.

If you are a teacher trainer, we ask you to encourage your students who are planning a career in teaching French to join as student members. Membership forms are available on the AATF Web site [www.frenchteachers.org], or we will send membership forms to anyone who requests them.

If you have access to state or local mailing lists of French teachers or members of other language organizations, please think to forward those lists to us, and we will verify whether or not they are already members of the AATF and, if not, do a special mailing to them. The lists must be current and must contain specifically French teachers.

Please help us recruit new and veteran teachers to help the AATF continue to be a dynamic and growing organization!

Vol. 32, No. 2 (November 2006)
The presence of French place names—towns, rivers, and lakes—bears witness to the passage of French explorers, fur traders, and settlers in the Midwest United States. Coming from Montreal down through the Great Lakes toward the Mississippi, explorers like Nicollet, Marquette and Jolliet, and La Salle laid claim to land for France and began to establish trading relationships with various groups of Native Americans living in what is now Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, and Missouri. Priests followed, as did soldiers and traders. Although the English took control of the greater part of this area following France's defeat in 1763, nonetheless the early presence of French people left its mark.

The following activities will introduce students to les États-Unis et la Francophonie in the Midwest.

III. Les Voyageurs
A. Some background
In the 17th and 18th centuries, the French were most interested in establishing a trade empire in the territory they called le pays du nord, and, in the lower Great Lakes area, le petit nord. The principal item for which they traded was, of course, fur: mostly beaver pelts, but also mink, otter, lynx, bear, muskrat, and so on. Indians provided the furs in exchange for manufactured goods; the furs were shipped to Europe through Montreal.

The cycle of the fur trade was basically as follows: in spring, canoes laden with goods to trade for furs left Montreal, bound for trade centers such as Michilimackinac (located at the strait between Lakes Michigan and Huron). From here, the goods were divided and smaller groups of canoes set out at mid-summer on smaller lakes and rivers, bound for Indian villages where they would exchange the trade goods for furs during the fall and winter. The following spring the canoes, laden with furs tied up in bales covered with canvas, arrived back at the trade centers. From here the furs were shipped to Montreal.

This trade continued, more or less regularly, from the mid-17th century to the mid-1800s. Perhaps the best-known part of the French fur-trade world were the boatsmen—les voyageurs. Even when the English and then the Americans came to dominate the fur trade, the voyageurs were almost all French-Canadian. Their physical strength,
The mid-summer gatherings of voyageurs, those heading back toward Montreal and those heading out into le pays du nord and le petit nord, were rowdy, joyful gatherings called rendez-vous.

B. Un voyageur du Michigan et de l’Indiana

The following series of texts and activities is based upon the account books of a fur trader/voyageur of the late 18th and early 18th century, Joseph Bailly. He was an independent trader, born in 1774 near Montreal, who was based for most of his career in Michilimackinac—today Mackinac Island—and who traded throughout Michigan and Indiana, into Illinois, and even into Minnesota. He settled on land just south of Lake Michigan in the new state of Indiana, in about 1822, and died there in 1835. Visitors can see his homestead today in the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore.

Joseph Bailly kept detailed account books—in French—for his fur trade business. In them he kept records of the goods he purchased for trade with the Indians, the goods he purchased to outfit and feed the voyageurs who worked for him, the furs that he and his voyageurs received from the Indians in trade, and the wages of the voyageurs who were his employees. He also recorded when he lent or borrowed money.

The currency unit most frequently used by Bailly is la livre, the old French-Canadian currency. Its units are: 1 livre = 20 sols; 1 sol = 12 deniers. In today’s terms, one livre is worth about $2.85. Bailly carefully noted the price of each item—the value of each fur he purchased, the value of axes and kettles and gunpowder and fabric and moccasins.

Bailly purchased several kinds of furs from the Indians, not just beaver pelts. While the other furs were counted individually, beaver pelts were always purchased by the pound. The Indians with whom he dealt were principally Ottawa, Potawatomi, and Miami. His wives were both half-Ottawa; Bailly apparently spoke several Indian languages.

The men who worked as voyageurs for Bailly were nearly all French-Canadian. They were paid different wages according to the role that they played. Men who sat at the front or rear of the canoe, to direct or to steer the vessel, were paid more than the men in the middle. Experienced men were paid more, as were men who were the leaders of a given expedition or aventure. Each voyageur was also allotted certain items according to a standard list, including a blanket, shirts, handkerchiefs (frequently worn on the head), and tobacco. Etienne Lomondiere, who made more money than other voyageurs, as we can see in the account book lists, worked frequently for Bailly and led numerous aventures for him.

IV. Le journal de Joseph Bailly (excerpts used with permission of the Old Jail Museum—Porter County Historical Society)

Following are three brief excerpts from Bailly’s account book or journal of around 1800. The three groups of items are (1) furs purchased, (2) goods traded to the Indians or carried to feed and clothe his voyageur employees, and (3) a list of his employees on one particular expedition and some of the supplies he was required to furnish for them.

For each account book excerpt, there are pre-reading exercises, the text itself, vocabulary, and activities that help the students to understand the world of Joseph Bailly and the fur trade.

In the texts: £ = livres (currency); lb = pounds (weight). Bailly gives first the number of items, then the name of the item, then the price per unit, then the total price.

As French teachers, we often feel prisoners of our school curriculum and the materials that need to be covered by the end of the school year. Unfortunately, when we are caught in our teaching routine with a list of grammatical points to cover before the date of the exam, it becomes easy to forget that languages are a tool that is used in our daily lives to communicate with one another. Indeed, we use language to speak to people, to read the newspaper, to watch television, to understand directions on a map, to mention only a few examples; therefore, a language is not only a school subject. In the long term, and depending on their individual choices of career or life style, our students will need to be able to do these things in their foreign languages. Although it can be difficult for middle school and high school students to envision their future, it is our responsibility as teachers to help them meet their immediate goal of passing their final exams by also encouraging them to use their language in real life situations. By doing so, we, teachers, enable them to develop the linguistic skills they will need in and outside of class. In order to help students acquire such skills, teachers may need to become creative to catch their students’ attention and explore other resources than their French textbooks.

USING AUTHENTIC MATERIALS IN THE FRENCH LANGUAGE CLASSROOM

Using authentic materials, such as artifacts, handicrafts, cookbooks, the Internet, advertisements, or videos, has become a popular way for French teachers to introduce new topics in their classes. Such materials can help teachers catch their students’ attention, but also reinforce the students’ cultural and linguistic learning. By handling French artifacts, looking at cookbooks, or working on research projects using French resources, our students will be more likely to understand on their own certain cultural and linguistic aspects. For instance, while working with a cookbook, they will realize that people use the metric system in France.

Even though many types of authentic materials are available to language teachers in a world where the Internet has shrunk distances and made all kinds of materials widely available, the media has also increased in popularity among French language teachers. Videos, such as movies, news broadcasts, documentaries, or reports, have been widely used in language classes. Indeed, such materials as television commercials have become pedagogical tools in the French classroom (Lawrence, 1987). They can be used to develop the students’ language skills and raise their cultural awareness. Indeed, using videos affects intermediate French students’ cultural learning (Herron, Dubreuil, Corrie and Cole, 2002). We can also see how much the media has gained in popularity in the field of teaching and learning a language, when we consider that TV5, which is a Francophone television channel broadcasted worldwide, created a video-based language-learning program (Boiron, 2002). In addition to providing exposure to French culture, the television and videos have the advantage of providing live pictures of people from the target culture, so that students can appreciate on their own the way people live and act in the country, although it is also important to make the difference between real life and acting. The media also has the opportunity of raising the students’ level of enthusiasm: students become excited about watching a video or working with newspapers in class and as a result tend to be more involved in class discussions and other activities.

DEVELOPING A PROJECT USING A TEEN MAGAZINE

All teachers know how difficult it can be to motivate their middle school and high school students to learn and appreciate the French language at a time of their lives when they do not necessarily enjoy their learning experience and do not clearly understand the benefits of understanding and speaking a different language.

The following project was developed for teenagers and young adults, who are advanced learners of French. However, it could be modified to suit other levels. The project objectives are both linguistic and cultural. Students will learn about the French media. They will use their existing knowledge of French to collect research materials in the target language. They will also acquire new knowledge in their topic of interest (e.g. vocabulary), so they can present their findings in writing and speaking by participating in class discussions.

In other words, students will have many opportunities to use the skills they have acquired in French class and other classes and to develop new skills. Teachers should allow a period of approximately eight weeks for the project to be fully completed.

INTRODUCING THE TOPIC

Objective: Warm-up activity on the media and current events

In class, the teacher introduces the topic of media and current event by generating a class or group discussion with a list of questions such as:

- What types of media do you like? Why?
- What is a current event?

Can you give examples of current events? If you wanted to know about a specific current event, where would you go find the information you needed?

After having answered such questions, the teacher and the students choose a current event that they will study together. To make sure that the students’ linguistic level and their choice of topic match, the teacher may provide them with a list of topics from which to choose. For homework, students then write a paragraph about what they know about the topic.

PRESENTING THE MEDIA

Objective: Becoming familiar with the French media and learning to find reliable research resources on-line in French.

Students may share their paragraphs regarding the chosen topic with one another or with the class. Then, the teacher shows the students how the current event was seen by various types of media. The teacher may ask the students to read a short article about the topic and take advantage of this opportunity to introduce the names of important French newspapers and magazines (e.g. Le Monde, Le Figaro, Le Nouvel Observateur, etc.; most newspapers and magazines are now available on-line) and provide the students with the technical words they will need to enable them to discuss newspaper articles, such as gros titre, colonne, or à la une. Then, the teacher may show them a news report on the topic; once again, the teacher may take advantage of this opportunity to introduce French television channels (e.g. TF1, France 2, France 3, Canal+, La Cinq/Arte, M6, TV5; also available on-line). If watching a news report is not an option in your classroom, this can be done as a homework assignment. For homework, students write a summary of the TV report.

PRESENTING THE MAGAZINES

Objective: Becoming familiar with a magazine article, practicing reading skills with an unfamiliar topic.

Teen and preteen magazines are originally designed for French speaking teenagers, but can be appropriate for second language learners. For children aged 10 to 15, Okapi and Je Bouquine are two examples of famous preteen magazines. While the first covers a variety of topics, the second one focuses more on reading and literature activities. Phosphore, Les Dossiers de l’Actualité, and Muze are French magazines for teenagers and young adults with different focus. As the first two magazines focus on current events and education, the latter emphasizes on celebrities (writers, actors, and designers), the media and fashion. Unlike other magazines and newspapers such as Le Monde or Le Figaro for example, which are often linguistically out of reach for nonnative speakers, these magazines are appropriate for second language learners, as the language used in the articles is not too sophisticated, and the magazines tend to cover a variety of topics dealing with today’s life, current events, and other age-appropriate topics. At this time, teachers may choose an article about the topic the students decided to study and analyze it in class providing guiding questions.

CHOOSING A PROJECT TOPIC AND FINDING MATERIALS

Objective: Forming teams, choosing a topic of interest, and looking for materials in the target language.

Now that the students have become familiar with the magazines, the teacher may provide them with a list of topics and research ideas, from which to choose. For this type of project, pair work is ideal since an individual student may become overloaded with the amount of work and groups of three or more are often more difficult to manage. Once they have chosen a topic, the teacher may organize a library session to enable the students to find the articles they are looking for. For homework, allow the students two weeks to find on their own two other sources on their topic in the target language.

UNDERSTANDING AND PRESENTING THE MATERIALS IN WRITING

Objective: Reading and writing activities.

Once the students have found the three sources needed for their research project, they will work on extracting the main ideas from the articles. The teacher should make sure to check the students’ work regularly, so that they remain focused on the task. Students will turn in a detailed outline of their future presentation to their teacher using the main ideas from the articles.

PREPARING A VISUAL AND DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

Objective: Creating a visual to help the presenters during their presentation and also to help the audience understand the presentation, and preparing discussion questions.

Students are ready to prepare a visual (power point presentation or poster board) about their topic. Full sentences are not allowed in their visual (as students will tend to read word for word what they have written during their presentation) and pictures are encouraged to aid them present their topic. After their presentation, the students will lead a discussion concerning the topic of their choice. In order to lead such discussions, they need to prepare three questions that they would like to ask their classmates.

CHOOSING AN EXCERPT AND FORMULATING COMPREHENSION QUESTIONS

Objective: Checking the presenters’ comprehension of their topic, allowing the audience to have read an excerpt on the topic prior the presentation to enable them to engage better in the discussion that will follow.

The presenters are responsible for choosing a short excerpt from the articles they have read and write five comprehension questions for their classmates. They will distribute the handouts to the class a few days before their presentation.

PRESENTING AND DISCUSSING

Objective: Sharing their findings with their classmates.

Finally, the students will present their topic with their visual aid, and lead a short discussion involving all students in the class in small groups or as the whole class.

At the end of the project, the teacher can assess his or her students’ work in various ways. It is highly recommended to assess their work regularly and not only at the end. Students could be graded on their written paper, the quality of their visual aid, their presentation, and their overall progress for instance. Teachers need to make sure that various aspects of the students’ work are assessed since students took on various responsibilities throughout the process of the project.

CONCLUSION: CULTURE LEARNING

In summary, there are many ways to incorporate culture into the foreign language curriculum, especially today with the wide use of the Internet. Teachers may have access to a range of authentic materials from which to choose: newspapers, videos, magazines, cookbooks, etc. However, having access to cultural materials is not sufficient in itself to encourage linguistic and cultural learning. Depending on the objectives of a foreign language class, authentic materials can be used in numerous ways. In order to help our students take advantage of the opportunity of using cultural materials, it is better to define clear goals and objectives that will be met by the end of a cultural project. Preteen and teen magazines are level- and age-appropriate language learning tools for advanced learners of French in middle and high school. Indeed, they offer many advantages for French learners and teachers. First, they cover global and Francophone current events as well as topics, which are interesting to young adults and teenagers. Such topics can be used in the classroom as the focus of discussions and other activities in French class. Second, they are attractive: these magazines count many photographs to illustrate their articles and a variety of types of articles varying in size and difficulty from which learners can choose. Third, unlike other magazines whose target is adults, the articles are originally written for a teen audience. In other words, although the topics covered may be advanced in content, the writing is easily accessible to advanced learners of French. Last, language learners enjoy using authentic materials since it enables them to use the language in a non traditional way.

AATF PLACEMENT BUREAU

The AATF offers its members a Placement Bureau service. We publish a monthly job list of positions in French at the university level. Although the labor involved in coordinating a job list for K-12 positions is prohibitive, we do occasionally get calls from schools looking for K-12 teachers. These announcements are directed to the Babillard on the AATF Web site [www.frenchteachers.org]. We also offer a dossier service which is available to teachers at all levels who want a secure place to maintain their complete placement file.

The job list subscription is $20 per year. Dossier service is an additional $15 for 12 mailings (additional mailings are $2.50 each). There is a $5 charge for members living outside the U.S. For more information, contact AATF Placement Bureau, Mailcode 4510, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, IL 62901; Telephone: (618) 453-5732; Fax: (618) 453-5733; E-mail: [staff@frenchteachers.org].

The AATF is pleased to announce that Intercultural Student Experiences (MN) will again recognize an outstanding high school teacher of French at the AATF annual convention in Baton Rouge in July.

Previous recipients of this award are Marion (Mimi) Hagedorn (KY) in 2005 and Davara Potel (OH) in 2006.

Dennis Meredith, Director of Education at ISE, says: “Our goal is simply to recognize those who do an outstanding job getting their students to speak French. The name of the award is based on our logo, which proclaims ‘Where Language Matters.’ The award reflects the mission of ISE as ‘a nonprofit educational organization founded more than 30 years ago by foreign language teachers for the purpose of creating authentic beyond-the-classroom experiences for American foreign language students and teachers.'”

AWARD: The ISE Language Matters Award will consist of a framed award certificate accompanied by a $500 cash award funded by ISE.

ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA: The applicant selected for this award will be a high school teacher of French and member of the AATF who has achieved outstanding success in getting his / her students to speak French through exemplary motivation and creative methods. In addition, the winner will be a teacher who has provided authentic immersion experiences outside the classroom for students to apply their speaking skills. Participation in an ISE program is not among the criteria.

DOSSIER: The following items, which should not be bound or stapled, constitute the nominee’s dossier: (1) A letter of nomination from an AATF member outlining why the nominee deserves the award and specifically addressing the criteria listed above; (2) A letter supporting the nominee from a school or district supervisor/administrator; (3) The nominee’s CV, (with all contact information), plus the name of the school principal and his/her contact information, and the e-mail of those providing letters in #1 and #2; (4) A personal statement from the nominee, noting evidence of activities, strategies, and techniques designed to promote and improve students’ speaking abilities in French, students’ achievements, and student exchange/travel experiences, as well as other immersion experiences outside of the classroom.

DEADLINES: The nominee’s dossier must be postmarked by February 1, 2007, and arrive by February 8, 2007. It should be sent to AATF, Mailcode 4510, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, IL 62901.

The recipient will be notified by April 1, 2007. The award will be presented during the AATF Convention in Baton Rouge, July 12-15, 2007. Questions about this award should be directed to Brenda Benzin [bbenzin@aol.com]. For more information in ISE visit [www.isemn.net].

MEMBERS’ NOTES

AATF Executive Director Jayne Abrate has been named as the 2006 recipient of the ACTFL Nelson Brooks Award for the Teaching of Culture. The award will be presented at the ACTFL Convention in Nashville on November 16, 2006. Other AATF members who have been recipients of this award include President-Elect Marie-Christine Koop, Region I Representative Myrna Delson-Karan, and Region II Representative Myrna Delson-Karan as well as, Isabelle Kaplan, Wendy Allen, Toni Theisen, Michael Oates, and Robert Lafayette.

Dr. Abrate was also re-elected to a second term as President of the Joint National Committee for Languages/International Council for Languages and International Studies, a language policy association of which the AATF is a founding member.

Jean-Paul Valette a quant à lui été promu au rang d’Officier dans l’Ordre des Palmes Académiques. Diplômé d’HEC et économiste de formation, il a mis ces qualités au service du développement de ressources pédagogiques innovantes. Jean-Paul Valette est également un spécialiste reconnu des Indiens Navajo, auxquels il a consacré plusieurs livres.
Cet été j’ai eu le plaisir de participer au stage de « Perfectionnement en Enseignement du FLE » à Québec comme boursière de l’AATF. Le stage a duré trois semaines, du 1er au 22 juillet. L’Université Laval est la première université francophone d’Amérique du Nord. Le campus de l’Université se trouve un peu éloigné du centre de la ville de Québec sur des lignes d’autobus.

Le stage comprenait un cours de didactique où on touchait les sujets tels la communication orale, l’enseignement de la grammaire, les stratégies d’apprentissage, et l’évaluation. Il y avait aussi des conférences données par des professeurs de l’Université sur la littérature pour enfants, la chanson québécoise, la phonétique, les contes et les légendes du Québec, la fonctionnement du système politique québécois, les origines de la langue française au Québec, la littérature québécoise et le cinéma québécois. Il y avait aussi plusieurs sessions pour nous familiariser avec les services diverses de la bibliothèque.

Normalement, on était en classe (ou dans une conférence) tous les jours de 8h30 jusqu’à 17h00, avec une heure et demie pour déjeuner. Comme travail il fallait écrire trois résumés de conférences (au choix) et un travail sur une étude scientifique d’un journal pédagogique. On a fait deux observations des cours de FLE, un cours de communication orale et un cours de grammaire. En plus, on a passé trois examens sur les informations discutées en cours de didactique.

Il y avait quelques excursions facultatives. Un samedi, on est allé sur la côte de Beaupré, à l’île d’Orléans, et aux chutes Montmorency. On est allé à l’Observatoire de la Capitale dans le vieux Québec. On a passé tout un samedi à Montréal où l’on a vu le Stade olympique, le vieux Montréal, plusieurs quartiers ethniques et le Mont Royal. Les visites au Musée de la Civilisation et au Musée des Beaux Arts à Québec faisaient partie du stage. En plus, pendant notre séjour, le festival de Québec a eu lieu. Compris dans le stage était le macaron qui donnait libre entrée aux spectacles pendant les dix jours. Il y avait toute sorte de musique et beaucoup de grandes vedettes québécoises en scène.

Je suis contente d’avoir fait ce stage. Peut-être que je ne suis pas sortie avec beaucoup de nouvelles idées pour enseigner, ce n’était pas le but du stage, mais j’ai appris quelque chose sur l’enseignement et ce que je fais dans la salle de classe. J’ai fait la connaissance des professeurs de français d’Europe, d’Amérique du Sud, d’Amérique latine, du Canada, et bien sûr, des États-Unis. Le seul inconvénient est qu’on n’a pas eu beaucoup de temps pour vraiment connaître la région ni pour rencontrer les Québécois. On était logé en résidence.

Une raison que je voulais faire un stage à Québec était parce que je ne connaissais rien de la ville ni de la province. C’était ma première visite au Canada! Je pense avoir une nouvelle appréciation pour le Canada comme pays francophone. Beaucoup de gens m’ont demandé de comparer ce stage aux stages que j’ai fait en France. Je leur ai dit que ce n’est ni mieux ni pire, c’est différent. Je suis contente d’avoir eu cette occasion de connaître une autre partie du monde francophone. J’en suis très reconnaissante à l’AATF, et je vous encourage de vous renseigner sur les bourses pour l’année prochaine.

LANGUAGE TEACHING

Now entering its 40th year, Language Teaching (CUP) is a quarterly, professional, peer-reviewed journal which is dedicated to providing a number of resources to its international readership of researchers and practitioners in L2 education at all levels of instruction. Each regular issue of the journal contains commissioned state-of-the-art reviews and surveys about various aspects of L2 learning, acquisition and teaching as well as comparative book reviews thematically linked to these reviews.

A further section of the journal publishes academic studies which use a replication approach. We invite submissions of previously unpublished articles based on literal, approximate or constructive replication of a previous study or studies. In keeping with the survey characteristics of Language Teaching. We also encourage submissions of meta-analyses which attempt to combine or synthesize a series of comparable research replications. Papers can be based on a broad range of topics.

Vol. 32, No. 2 (November 2006)
publicize the initiative by distributing photos who want to serve as mentors, have a men- ter about the initiative through presentations been established. The chapter coordi- nated Mentoring Coordinators, and in many indi- viduals play, guidelines for Chapter mentoring and collegial sharing. Thirty-two chapters have designated Mentoring Coordinators, and in many chapters these mentors have presented workshops at state language conferences on the subject of mentoring, as well as pro- vide support for the teachers in the chapter who are serving as mentors, have mentors, or participate in colleague to colleague shar- ing.

In order to clarify the roles each of these individuals play, guidelines for Chapter Mentor Coordinators and Mentors have been established. The chapter coordina- tor’s role is primarily to (1) inform the chapter about the initiative through presentations at local meetings, the chapter website and/ or newsletter, etc.; (2) be a mentor and/or help identify individuals within the chapter who want to serve as mentors, have a mentor, or participate in collegial sharing; (3) publicize the initiative by distributing photocopies of the Tête-à- tête flyer (we can send you an electronic copy) at state, local, and regional conferences, chapter meetings, schools, etc.; (4) serve as a liaison between the chapter and the national coordinators. The role of a mentor is to (1) create a Tête-à-Tête partnership to discuss ideas and enable the partners to support and learn from each other; (2) offer assistance and collaboration; (3) share areas of expertise and correspond via email, telephone or face to face. Mentor/Mentee relationships can be intensive or more casual and sporadic, depending upon needs which may arise during teaching experiences.

Jo Ellen Sandburg and I are the National Coordinators of this initiative. We are in the process of creating a database to pair partic- ipants according to geographical location, areas of expertise, and special inter- est, and we would like to update the informa- tion we have. If you have volunteered and are currently working with someone, we would like to hear from you about your experiences. If you have contacted some-

LA FRANCE DIVISÉE

This 36-min. documentary film explores the two sides of France during World War II: the collaboration with the Vichy government as well as the courage of many Righteous Gentiles and members of the Resistance. It also includes interviews with seven French people: a Holocaust survivor, three child survivors, two historians, and a leader of the French Resistance. Each interviewee presents a very different account of his/her experiences. The film concludes with actual footage of two historic apologies from the French government and Catholic Church. President Jacques Chirac publicly apologized for France’s role in the deportation of Jews (1995), and Bishop Olivier de Berranger apologized for the silence of the French Catholic Church and asked for forgiveness (1997). Written, produced, and directed by Barbara P. Barnett and Eileen M. Angelini. Recommended for high school or college.

Go to our national advocacy Web site: Ideas for French Language & Culture Advocacy in the U.S. [www.utm.edu/staff/globeq/advofr.shtml], and use the section called “Local Level” to profile your school district. Once you have done this, you will be of great help to anyone helping you, and you will be able to show others how to do it.

While you are using the Web site, inform yourself fully about what the AATF is doing. Now let ten colleagues know what you have discovered.

Inform the AATF Advocacy Commission the minute you think your program or someone else’s may be in jeopardy. Send any relevant newspaper articles, e-mails, or letters which you can share.

College faculty and chairs, whether or not you hold language collaborative meetings or language fairs, keep a list of the French teachers in your region. See if you can meet over coffee with them. If you have regular professional contact with them, keep a file of their news. Remind them about the AATF advocacy program. At the very least, try to keep track of your graduates who teach in your state.

For all teachers: Monitor school board decisions which could affect your program. Monitor relevant county board of trustees decisions. Monitor what your local parent organization is saying. Track your graduates, and keep a collection of student success anecdotes. Know your community. Which businesses export to France or Francophone countries; which are subsidiaries of companies in the Francophone world? Think of the group of interested real-world allies arising from your connections with such companies.

Each single timely gesture in defense of French has the potential to play a valuable role in saving a worthy French program. After all, it only took one stone from the sling of David to bring down Goliath. Those who would step up to perform such deeds need to remember that an increasingly organized French has the potential to play a valuable role in saving a worthy French program.
